Dear readers!
I think English would be perfect for a common language. It is easier to learn than other languages, for example german, and also if everybody could speak english well, you could communicate with anyone in Europe. You could travel anywhere without being scared about how you can make yourself understood.

In my opinion for some people it’s very hard to acquire a new language. Someone who never even heard or learnt english before cannot learn it easily. To acquire a new language takes a lot of time. You have to study every day, go on classes, and it’s better if you practise it regularly.

Adults usually have a job. They have to go to their workplace almost every day, and if they have children, they need to take care of them. Next to these things they don’t have much time to learn. Kids learn faster, so it wouldn’t be a big trouble for them to learn a new language.

English became a world language. I think it is taking over the world because it’s one of the easiest languages, and owing to the political power of the english speaking countries. Nowadays in schools, probably every student has a class where they study english.

Task Two

An American communication company calls for entries to an essay competition on the role of the Internet. Share your thoughts on this topic in an essay (around 200 words). Write about the following:

- the opportunities and forms of virtual communication
- the effects of the web on personal contacts
- the reliability of the information gathered from the internet
- internet and data protection

In this world internet turned out to be the thing that controls us. It’s like a key that opens any door. You can listen to music, study or keep contact with your friends and family. You can share your personal things on it.

Old people say that chatting on our phones ruins personal contacts. I wouldn’t say so. I meet my friends just the same as I used to and I can talk to them even when we can’t be together. Not to mention those who are far away from us. Social media is the thing that connects this big world.

Personally internet never failed me when I was looking for some information. When there is something connecting to a school subject that I don’t know, I can find what I’m looking for instantly. It’s useful for basically anything I bet you can’t tell me something that Google can’t find.

Of course internet has its dark side for example there’s cyberbullying. There are many young people who don’t know how to keep their personal life away from the web. You should never share anything that might not be safe and never forget that what’s on the internet, stays there forever. You always have to be careful.
